Dear President-elect Biden and Presidential Transition Co-chairs:

As a broad and diverse group of Reproductive Justice advocates and stakeholders who strongly support policies that support the health and well-being of people across the country, we congratulate you on your historic victory and express our appreciation for your commitment to protect and improve health care for all. We write to urge that the comprehensive scope of reproductive health care be an early priority for the Biden Administration, and as such ask that on day one of the new administration, you establish the White House Office of Sexual and Reproductive Health and Wellbeing (OSRHW), under the Domestic Policy Council.

Sexual and reproductive health and wellbeing is an expansive frame for the issues that determine outcomes for all people in America. It is a human rights agenda ensuring that all people have access to non-coercive healthcare services and the social supports needed to enable them to prevent and treat illness, experience the best health outcomes possible, and make the reproductive decisions that are right for them. This broad goal of the OSRHW reflects the Reproductive Justice focus on the human right to maintain personal bodily autonomy, have children, not have children, and parent the children we have in safe and sustainable communities.

This holistic agenda is a necessary remedy to the current sexual and reproductive health services and social support policies, regulations, and funding streams that are siloed, disjointed and ill-suited for ensuring that federal agencies, states and healthcare systems address systemic racism and assist providers in serving patients. The gravest effect of our broken system is persistent inequity which denies people of color, people in rural communities, people with disabilities and people of low income without autonomy to determine their reproductive futures, and therefore the array of health and economic decisions key to their lives.

Establishing the OSRHW will ensure a permanent infrastructure to (1) develop a federal strategy for promoting equitable sexual and reproductive health and wellbeing through a human rights, gender and racial equity lens, and (2) better coordinate the actions of the many departments and agencies whose actions in both domestic and foreign policy contexts impact sexual and reproductive health and wellbeing of people in America and around the world, including the Departments of Defense, Education, Health and Human Services, Homeland Security, Labor, Housing and Urban Development, Treasury, and Veterans Affairs, and the Office of Personnel Management. To fully actualize this comprehensive approach to health and wellbeing across intersectional issues and agencies the OSRHW should sit within the Domestic Policy Council structure, be led by someone with demonstrated expertise, and report to the President.

In response to the ongoing need for policy initiatives to promote reproductive health and well-being, the diverse organizations listed below write to you in support of creating the White House Office of Sexual and Reproductive Health and Wellbeing. It has been my pleasure to engage members of the Transition team, and we hope that ongoing discussions will effectively achieve our common goal of ensuring that all people have access to the comprehensive sexual and reproductive health care, services, and supports they need.

Sincerely,
